

Cardinals Beat Giants in Abbreviated Game, Zimmermann's Stupid Play Helps Dodgers Win

GIANTS IN THE REAR WHEN STORM BREAKS

Consequently They Lose a Five Inning Game to the Cardinals.

MATTY IS BEATEN AGAIN

What Hits Are Made Off Him Are Made Use Of for Runs.

The Giants lost a full game in the pennant pursuit yesterday. The Cardinals beat them in a five-inning encounter and gained a full game on them, moving into second place. The Dodgers and Reds played a thirteen-inning tie, and the former fell back to third place. The Cubs were beaten for the third time in succession by the Brooklyn and are now fourth. The Pirates lost in Philadelphia.

What changes the Giants had of winning from the Cardinals yesterday were washed away by the rain. The teams grappled for five innings, then came the storm, which drenched the field so thoroughly that further playing was out of the question. The torrent came fast in time to insure a victory for the Cardinals by a score of 5 to 0.

The elements timed their interference in behalf of the Cardinals in the second inning. The rain fell so fast that the third man was out in the second half of the fifth, when it came down in a deluge. If the Giants had been able to prolong that half-inning for a few seconds it would have been no game. McGraw, however, played the string out. He didn't try to beat the rain in that way. He tried for a legitimate win or tie by trying for a run by hitting a putout when he might have deferred action by holding a runner on first and have been saved by the rain. The runner tried to steal and was thrown out.

Christy Mathewson, who is having a hard time winning his twentieth victory, was supported regally by the Giants, but raged support didn't have anything to do with St. Louis runs. The Cardinals made their runs on a couple of hitting forays and a sacrifice hit. They batted their tallies unaided by errors. The principal reason they won, for their three runs anyway, was Matty and his project. Neither executed his part in it well. Burns died to Wilson, and Becher was slow to detect where the ball was. Wilson doubled him with a splendid throw.

St. Louis in the second. He reached first on a scorching grounder to Becher, who blocked the ball, but lost it in the scramble and was clawing for it as Wilson crossed first. Wilson moved up on an out and Becher batted him in. The Giants scored in the same inning on Dolan's two base miff on Fletcher, a passed ball and Huggins' fumble of Huggins' force hit. Stock hit into a double play.

Dolan helped his side with the bat even if his pitching was unsatisfactory. He singled in the third, knocking the ball past third base. Huggins singled the first base line with a single. Magee sacrificed. Dolan struck out, but Miller made of it. Huggins hit to Miller, who hit a shove which sent it on tantalizing bounds over Matty and between Doyle and Fletcher. Two men scored.

Matty opened a New York third with a single and Becher walked. Two on and none out. Doyle's was a mild and futile effort. He skied to Miller. Nor could Burns do anything to help. He bounced to Miller for a force. It wasn't until Robertson spanked a single over Miller that a run came in, after which, with two out, Fletcher blocked on a slide.

The Giants littered the field with errors in the fifth, but by good holding redeemed the situation. Fletcher made a bad throw on Doyle, and when Huggins hit to Merkle Fletcher dropped the throw at second. Magee sent a short upfit to left. Burns trapped the ball. The play was cleverly conceived, but the part for the saw on the instant that Doyle was hitting second and Huggins hovering between first and second. There was a double play in eight but when Doyle did get over to second Burns made a hurried throw which hit the ground. Instead of two being out nobody was out and the bases were filled. Burns easily could have thrown to third and forced Doyle, but he would have retired only one. He did not. Clicking on the play, but poor execution spoiled it.

Still the Giants got out of that mess. Dolan rolled to Fletcher and took a wide throw. Miller fled to Becher, who doubled Huggins at the plate with a fine throw. Huggins was hoisted by his own plate and compelling Huggins to slide wide.

It looked rosy for a tie when Matty Miffed off a ball in the New York ninth. It didn't look that way long. Becher fouled to Beck. Murray, who ran for Matty, was thrown out stealing by Sura Shor Snyder, and Doyle fled out. Next

BRESNAHAN CHIDES ZIM AND FIGHT IS ON

Battle Rages in Dugout Until Umpire Stops It—Gives No Decision.

DUMB PLAY LOSES GAME

Dodgers Score Brace of Runs on It and Roger Takes Heine to Task.

It had to happen sooner or later, and it did happen in the dugout yesterday's game at Ebbets Field when the Dodgers stopped the Cubs for the third straight time and dropped them, under a 2 to 3 score to fourth position in the National League race. Yes, Heine Zimmermann tried his best to get through a metropolitan visit without being chased off the field; he set a record by striking six batters.

Hard Head Heine went out with Rowdy Roger Bresnahan as the result of a fight in the dugout. Zimmermann's head was the bone of contention. He pulled one of his own teeth and broke back action reversible thinking plays. Thereby he spilled the game on Humphries and put the prevalent German lust in the heart of Bresnahan.

At the home Roger raced half way down the lines shaking his fist at the mighty Zim. With a violent effort he restrained himself until Brooklyn took the field. As he came in to the dugout, Roger had taken a seat near Hank O'Day the catcher greeted him in this sarcastic fashion: "The finest little third baseman Brooklyn ever had. If you had twice as much brain you'd be nearly half witted."

Zimmermann sprang up, swinging both hands. The players crowded in the dugout. Roger closed and rolled upon the concrete floor. The stoical O'Day sat grim, no agitation showing outwardly. Umpire Mal Eason crowded in among the clubs and helped to separate the sturdy belligerents. As the two were pulled apart, protesting, a red welt showed on Rogers' cheek.

Brooklyn had three men on bases, with one out in the fourth. Otto Miller, a slow runner, hit a sharp grounder that Heine another. Heine's first bound was a throw to first.
